Enwan the Entrepreneur: Enwan's First Savings Account Dr. Michael H. Casson Jr.
Enwan, a young enterprising boy, is faced with a dilemma of “to spend” or “not to spend” all of his birthday money on a new bike. His friend, Saniyah Spender, suggests that he spend his money on the bike that he so craves but Enwan is not keen on the idea of spending all of his money without a plan to make more. Enwan then asks his dad how he makes all of his money and his dad tells him that he is an entrepreneur. This was an epiphany for Enwan, and from that point on he knew that he wanted to be an entrepreneur too. There were only two questions that Enwan needed to answer now, “What would his business be?” and “Where would he keep his money while he figures it out?” Enwan’s dad suggested that he put his money into a savings account so that it would be safe and earn interest. After figuring out that interest was free money given to people who keep money in their bank, he was all in! So the only question left to answer is “What will be his first business?”
