I want to represent my son Paul Fraga
Are you a parent? Does your child play any sport? Does he have future? Maybe he is professional already? After many years in the world of soccer, first as a player and now as an agent, I've noticed that there are many parents who would like to represent their children in their sport career. In fact, many of them already do. However, there are many cases in which the professional relationship established between them eventually affects the family relationship. As a result, both the professional relationship and the family relationship end up dynamited. That is why in this book I wanted to pick up my two earlier works: "The Art of being a Soccer Agent" and Are you a Pushy Parent?", so that all those parents who want to lead the career of their children have the best tools to perform their duties. These books are focused on soccer, the first one is more technical and the second one more emotional, but they are equally valid for any other sport. I hope you like it and that it helps you a lot.
