Kate has always believed there was just one right man for her. This hope has taken her through her youth, college days, mission, grad school, and still sustains her as she dedicates all her time to her job as executive assistant to the governor. She's now 28, and she feels like she has dated every available man. The "Why aren't you married yet?" question is getting pretty old.

After one unbelievably bad charity date finally pushes her over the edge, Kate is ready to clean her slate of all the men she’s ever met. That very night, she receives an invitation to a reunion with her roommates from summer camp many years earlier. The other women are eager to share how they each met their Mr. Right, which would leave Kate as the odd one out. Should she go? If she does, what can she tell them?

Join the girls from the "Baby Bear Bungalow" in several fun and hilarious short love stories in one, with five unique girlfriends who meet, go different directions, and then reunite with an unforgettable outcome. An ideal read for anyone who believes in true love.
